in july of 1954, a group of horry county citizens met in conway for the purpose of determining a means of providing additional educational opportunity for the people of the county. these men of vision, cognizant of the mounting expenses incurred in obtaining a college education, and aware of the relatively small percentage of horry county high school graduates pursuing higher education, determined among themselves to do what they could to rectify the situation.

the first organized meeting of these citizens was called on july 23, 1954, at the horry county memorial library in conway. also present at the inaugural meeting were members of the conway merchants association and certain public school officials of horry county. these assembled delegates declared themselves to constitute an association for which the purpose of operation would be the advancement of higher learning within horry county.

at a meeting on august 6, 1954, the decision was made to form an eleemosynary corporation, and the designation "the coastal educational foundation, inc." was adopted. the public school superintendents of the county were asked to serve in an advisory capacity as ex-officio members of the foundation. at this meeting a constitution was formulated and adopted.

within the month the secretary of the state of south carolina issued a charter to the coastal educational foundation, inc.

the next six years was a busy period for this newly formed foundation. a committee representing the foundation was authorized to enter into negotiations with the college of charleston, in charleston, south carolina, with the proposal that a two year junior college in horry county be maintained under the auspices of the charleston institution. a sympathetic ear was found and an off-campus branch of the college of charleston, known as "coastal carolina junior college" was established. as tangible evidence of their own convictions, the members of the foundation took it upon themselves to underwrite some $18,000 as a guarantee towards the operation of the proposed college's first year.

the coastal carolina junior college opened its doors at conway high school on september 20, 1954, with an enrollment of fifty-three students. afternoon and evening classes were scheduled to provide an opportunity for working persons to attend college during non-working hours.

this inaugural year proved a very trying one for the foundation and its members. faced with the financial responsibility of continuing the college, the members frequently made great personal sacrifice in order to keep the movement alive.

from september, 1954, through june of 1958, the coastal carolina junior college served as an off-campus branch of the college of charleston, during this four-year period the school slowly increased its enrollment and added significantly to its course offerings. the services of dr. e. j. woodhouse were secured as the first director of the college.

many history-making events occurred during these years and a strong basis was being laid for the educational future of the citizens of horry county. dr. george c. rogers, a former superintendent of the charleston city schools, served as administrative director of the college from 1955 until his retirement in 1960.

on november 4, 1958, a referendum was held on the question of raising county taxes by three mills to provide funds to support the school; the vote was carried in the affirmative by a margin of four to one. the members of the foundation were thereby relieved of the annual chore of soliciting funds to insure the financial success of the operation of the college.

because of the constitutional prohibition against levying a public tax for a private purpose, the horry county higher education commission was created by legislative act on april 9, 1959, with the members of the coastal educational foundation, inc., becoming the first members of the commission. the newly created commission in turn was given the responsibility of administering the funds derived from the tax levy.

the first day of august, 1959, was an historic one for the college. on that day, joseph w. holliday, chairman of the horry county higher education commission, and william h. patterson, dean of administration of the university of south carolina, affixed their signatures to an agreement that joined the two parties in the operation of the coastal carolina junior college. the college thus became a branch of the university of south carolina. this contract went into effect with the fall semester of the academic year of 1960-61.

many events led to the historic signing of this agreement. the college had operated independently for a two year period (1958-60), and was faced with the option of beginning the long struggle for regional accreditation as an independent college or affiliating with a stronger, more established institution as an off-campus branch. it was only natural that the commission would look to its own state university for help.

w. c. casper was named as director of the coastal carolina center upon the retirement of dr. rogers, and was the chief administrator for a two year period from 1960 to 1962.

during the administration of eldred e. prince, in 1961, the horry county higher education commission and coastal education foundation faced one of its more difficult tasks. the group was confronted with the challenge of securing a suitable site and raising the necessary funds to erect a building to accommodate the academic program of the university center. a one hundred and eighty-five acre site was secured on u.s. highway 501 between myrtle beach and conway. the major portion of this land was donated jointly by the burroughs timber company and international paper company. a successful fund raising campaign was initiated and carried to a successful completion. more than $317,000 in pledges was secured by public subscription, exceeding the campaign goal by some $17,000, to erect an academic building on the campus site. practically every citizen of horry county was involved in the campaign in some way.

coastal carolina center of the university of south carolina opened the doors of its new building for the first time in september of 1963 and welcomed 110 full time students to its campus. edward m. singleton, superintendent of the conway city schools, had been appointed the new director of the college in july.

dedicatory ceremonies were held on the college campus on november 3, 1963. more than 60 guests from the university of south carolina were present for this service.

during the year 1963, it became apparent that certain members of the horry county higher education commission would have to resign their positions. because the commission had been created by statute, those members serving on the commission and also holding other governmental appointive positions found themselves unable to serve in a dual capacity. the coastal educational foundation and the horry county higher education commission had functioned jointly as a singular body after april 9, 1959, with the sixteen members of each organization holding membership in both the commission and the foundation, during the year 1963-64, it also became apparent that for legal and other reasons the two groups should become separate entities.

in a meeting held on april 2, 1964, a resolution was adopted wherein those members of the commission who were holding other positions created by statute would resign from the horry county higher education commission and would form the nucleus of a revised coastal educational foundation, inc. by this same resolution the remaining members of the horry county higher education commission did resign their positions as members of the coastal educational foundation.

the year 1964 saw another significant service rendered to the people of this area by the coastal educational foundation. in the summer of 1963 the city schools of conway began a search for suitable land on which to erect a new athletic plant which would include a football stadium with four thousand permanent seats, and outdoor cinder track, and a baseball field. the foundation was approached by the board of trustees of the conway schools concerning the possibility of using land held in the name of the foundation. the idea was well received by the foundation, for members of the body could quickly see the advantage of having a modern athletic plant on the college campus to be used by the college and other public schools of the area. the foundation subsequently approved the request in a formal meeting and not only made some fifteen acres of land available, but agreed to underwrite a certain portion of the capital needed to make the project a success. this stadium now stands on the western portion of the college property adjacent to s.c. highway 544 as another monument to the unselfish ideals of the members of the foundation.

a most significant action by the coastal educational foundation during the year 1966 was the advancement of a loan in the amount of $48,000 to the horry county higher education commission to insure the construction of a general purpose building for the college campus. the commission had previously sold $200,000 in general county obligation bonds and had also been assured of $140,000 from the federal government to aid in construction of the building.

thus the project of the year 1965-66 was the construction of a general-purpose building, which contains a small auditorium, a book store and campus shop, a language laboratory, a seminar room, and a cafeteria. this beautiful building, along with the atheneum, adds much to the aesthetic value of the campus.

during the late spring of 1966, plans were made to institute a two-year program in nursing at coastal carolina. it was initiated in the fall of that year.

the atheneum society moved forward rapidly during the summer and early fall of 1966. during that year the society contributed $15,000 to be used for equipment for the new student union building. this made possible the installation of a modern language laboratory. atheneum memberships totaled 95, and $16,735 was contributed to the society.

during the spring of 1967, both the commission and the foundation began to concern themselves with the expansion of the local college into a four year institution. an audience was requested with the south carolina higher education commission. the efforts of this presentation will some day result in a four year college for the coastal area of our state.

the coastal carolina regional campus of the university of south carolina was evaluated by the southern association of colleges and schools during the year 1967-68 and was found to satisfy the evaluative criteria of that association. this was an experience of great importance to the college, since the entire faculty and student body became involved in a thorough self-study.

edward m. singleton, director of the college, was granted a leave of absence for the academic year 1967-68 in order to pursue a doctor of philosophy degree in educational administration at the university of south carolina. larry l. biddle was appointed acting director of the college in mr. singleton's absence.

the atheneum society continued to grow during the year 1968, and by november membership had increased to 137, the chief project for the society for 1967-68 was the purchase of more than $5,000 in much needed science equipment for use in the nursing program at the college.

one of the most important tasks to face the horry county higher education commission was providing additional space for the shelving of books in the college library. hoping to have a minimum of 20,000 volumes by january 1970, the commission made plans to expand the present library facility. this will make available 7000 square feet at a cost of $180,000.

mr. singleton returned to his post as director of the college during the summer of 1968.

the college assumed the responsibility of providing higher education for the military personnel of myrtle beach air force base in august of 1968.

this brings to date the history of the coastal educational foundation and the horry county higher education commission. in fulfilling their ideal of providing greater opportunity for the people of horry county, these dedicated men and women have distinguished themselves. the people of this area, in making use of these facilities, show their deep appreciation to the foundation and the commission for the great service they are doing. the coastal carolina regional campus will long stand as a memorial to the vision and dedication of the men who founded it.

a collection of beauty and talent. twelve of coastal carolina's loveliest ladies, each sponsored by a college organization, vying for the glittering crown of miss coastal carolina 1969. there were many weeks of rehearsal — polishing dance routines, practicing "quarter turns", final dress fittings.

at last the night arrives — december 6, 1968 — it will be a very special night for one of the lucky contestants. on stage the girls present a cool air of self-assurance. but backstage, nerves are frayed as each contestant prepares herself for that all-important category — talent.

as the judges tally their scores, the results of another contest are announced. in the mr. coastal competition, the top five males, as voted upon by the student body, are: jack anderson, henry hucks, larry hyman, dan kingsbury and jim mayer.

the field is narrowed to the five loveliest: cindy carter, georgette jensen, connie rickenbaker, and betty hendrick. each girl is interviewed and judged for poise and the ability to think on her feet.

as the final scores are tallied, entertainment is provided by the beautiful voice of gayle herring.

anne blizzard, miss sun fun usa, takes her final bow as miss coastal carolina 1968.

the tension mounts as the title of mr. coastal 1969 is bestowed upon larry hyman.

hearts pound and happy tears flow as the second runner-up is announced: cindy carter. lovely connie rickenbaker takes honors as first runner-up.

an enthusiastic audience and a thrilled young lady hear the announcement that radiant betty hendrick is miss coastal carolina 1969.

We Challenge You!

Ah-ha! January 31, 1969. A day to remember to all lovers of a beautiful landscape. On this important day in the history of Coastal Carolina, the delapidated remains of "Christmas Wonderland" were removed by the industrious Circle K boys.

Did we say industrious? We're sorry. It is a misrepresentation of this year's club. They are a long way from doing the connotations that this word brings to mind. To most of the school and community, and most certainly to us, the "Christmas Wonderland" of 1968 was really a service of straw padded paths twisting and turning among freshly painted story book characters who danced and bopped in rhythm.

It was set up in the quadrangle surrounded by a thick rim of handcut sapling pines. As a visitor would come rising above the starry twilight, he could hear the twinkling tunes rising above the tree tops. The boys started work over a month in advance had been through years of storage. They had provided the children of the community with a little joy at Christmas. They were just lined up by the same children had returned to see the vision this year, we're sure they would have been disappointed. After several days of being in this condition, the merciful wind blew this injustice to Christmas over, and destined it to stay that way into the middle of January. If this unorganized display could have been called a wonderland, the wonder and amazement was at the slackness of the Circle K, not at the beauty of the project.

Could anything more be expected from this club - a club whose energies are directed only at a good time? It has no incentive what-so-ever. In fact, when questioned about the failure, one club member had the audacity to weakly reply, "Well, none of the students' responsibility. It was the Circle K's and there is no excuse for them." However, the trouble is not just in the organization, it lies mainly within the people who make it up - of course, the sophomores have always been duds as far as spirit is concerned. The freshmen made a big splash at the beginning of the year, but all that is left is a puddle of water. (Could the fault of this be due to the students themselves or to the type of campus activity into which they have been urged to display spirit?) Either side can be discussed.

Student activities are not designed to bring out favorable characteristics. What kind of personalities can be built just by parties, parties, parties. Even they become boring after a while. Nobody enjoys just fun and more fun. Why doesn't the student council realize the problem or design some projects that will benefit the school or community - that will help people - that will bring the students together in the fellowship of peace and friendship. If they could, maybe the students could learn to feel pleasure when they feel the internal glow inspired by a good deed. Is it possible for our student council to plan such, or is it too square to accept such a modern challenge.
